Katlyn Davidson joined Norman Hanson & DeTroy as an associate in 2011. She focuses her practice on workers' compensation matters.

Prior to joining the firm, Katlyn worked in the Federal Defender's Office for the District of Maine. While in law school, she participated in Vanderbilt Law School's Civil Practice Clinic, handling appeals for social security disability benefits before the Social Security Administration. She also served as an Associate Justice for the Moot Court Board Managing Council and was the Policy Project Coordinator for the Women Law Students Association. Also during law school, she interned with the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Maine.
